HE NEW FIGURE HAS ARRIVED. IT IS WEDGE-SHAPED AND WILLOWY

The New Models at the Dressmakers' Convention Show that There Is to Be a Return to to the Willowy Type of Girl.

Padded and Broad Shoulders, Just Like Brother's, Will Distinguish the Stylish Girl This Year from Others of Her Sex.

ONE are the days of the blousy, pager type of fashions, in which et any one figure looked as ell as the next, those styles which ere so favorable to the immature ure of the young girt and the overly re figure of the matron alike.

The new models arriving from Paris, own by the International Society of kers at Madison Square Gar-Concert Hall, will make many & an hie herself without loss of time corsetiere, and demand that her superfluous flush be incased in a which shall meet the demands the new figure.

the new figure has arrived here are the costumes to display The waistline has suddenly beso a very important feature in the m, and the cut of each and every design is so planned to emphasize that. The shoulders are broad, her than sloping; and many of the detan couturiers evince a tendency emulate their brethren who cater man and to pad out the shoulders of the coats quite is the most accepted the long shoulder of the 1830 styles there is deftly added the vest and fichu lines which belong to an earlier period and the pinked and pierced little volants that were favored in Marie Antoinette days. The cloth is coft mastique shade with just the relief of the vest and wrist ruffles in rafts, these touched with a deeper tint velvet. The skirt is shirred at the ad, the volants running from knee to hem, and the broad hem faced, well with a mastique velveleen that holds it out delightfully in quite the old-way. This model is by Bechoff & David.

Carriage or Evening Wrap.

HE shoulder yoke is the foundation of this wrap, and to it the full folds of velvet are shirred, an empiecement in lace with bouillonne ribbon overlying the shoulders. At the knee there is an entre-deux of chiffon, rated with shirred ribbon, and to this a full flounce is shirred. The wes are huge and baggy and flare open on the arm finished with frills of

The Best Type of Tailor-Made.

HE fitted coat that defines every line of the figure is at its best when relieved with a smart vest, and in this Bechoff & David model the cloth is an Oxford mixture, the vest strongly contrasting. The plaids are rored for this purpose, and in the illustration show a coat with revers lined appear over the hips, and the box-platted skirt sets smoothly at the top and he fulness is increased by a flounce cleverly set on halfway below the knee and following the lines of the upper skirt exactly.

Of the Demi-Tailleur Style.

DED cloth is combined with a vest and accessories of white lace and pate blue cloth, trimmed with English embroidery. The bolero effect is all shirred and full, crossing on the bust, the sleeve with an upper puff starting from a broad shoulder line. The skirt is extremely full, being in-will doubtless have to solve the problem of letting the skirt drag and depend on the broad facing of velveteen that so many makers are using to minimize the possible damage to the sheer cloth or the exquisite velvet. Belts, four, five and six inch widths, are quite a feature; and the bucklesthey usually appear in the front onlyare shaped on severely classical lines. In emphatic contradistinction to the costume coat the separate wrap is fashioned as loose and full and flowing as the maker can accomplish. From a yoke, either real or simulated, over the shoulders, the coat is applied in lines that are as nearly circular in out as compatible with the style. These gorments look almost equally well plain or trimmed, but the evening coats are marvels of elaboration. Fluted ribbon is among the latest arrivals and lends is among the latest arrivals and lends itself to applique beautifully, while those shirred and bouilionne ribbons and braids that are almost like lace have taken to themselves a furtherance of the triumphant career that was but temporarily set aside by the warm weather and the lingerie and tub frocks.
